Dear Commissioner:

I am writing to ask you to give local low-power FM radio station applicants precedence over translators that broadcast from distant locales and provide no local content whatsoever. As you know, as things stand, big cities like Chicago have been told there is no room for new LPFM radio stations. But at the same time, translators that use the same equipment and the same frequencies as LPFM have been granted licenses again and again. I hope you will reconsider this decision and make sure more local voices are heard in this time of rampant media consolidation.

Please prioritize local low-power FM applicants in large markets over translator licenses that provide no local programming.

Sincerely,

Kate Singerino

I am an independent audio producer and an avid radio listener. I believe that it is critical for a vibrant democracy to have ^{accessible} media outlets ~~accessible~~ that ordinary people can participate and listen to. Independent voices on the air have exposed me to important new ideas. It's the responsibility of the government to provide this service to the public

Independent community radio is very important for a number of reasons: music becomes homogenized and people don't have access to new, local music; it also facilitates involvement in our local communities when people can identify with the people & issues being covered.

More than ever, we need to be hearing people from Chicago on the air in Chicago. Too many stations are being homogenized through major corporations' control over multiple markets across the country. Having radio stations which address local issues and play local (as well as other more independent) music is very important to me and my community here in Chicago. Please help us reassert our control over local programming!
